Disability and Abuse Project

Mission

The mission of the Disability and Abuse Project is to identify ways to reduce the risk of abuse, to promote healing for victims, and to seek justice for those who have been victimized by abuse or exploitation. The project focuses on physical, sexual, and emotional abuse of people with intellectual and developmental disabilities. The mission is accomplished through research, education, public policy, law enforcement, professional consulting, and increasing public awareness. The activities of the project are done primarily on a volunteer basis.

Project Advisors

More than three dozen individuals currently serve as advisors to the Disability and Abuse Project. They include researchers, mental health professionals, educators, advocates, and service providers. The list of advisors is found on the project’s website at: https://disabilityandabuse.org/consultants.htm

2019 Activities

Website. The project operates a website at: www.disabilityandabuse.org. The “what’s new” page keeps website visitors aware of the activities of both the Disability and Abuse Project and the Disability and Guardianship Project. Activities are listed chronologically and have postings going back to September 2011. In addition to data, research, reports, resources, and books on disability and abuse, the website also has an archive of activities and materials from 2000 to 2005.

What’s New. For the last few years, Spectrum Institute maintained one “what’s new” page for updates on the activities of both projects. To make it easier for website visitors to access information of interest to them, we now operate a separate “what’s new” page for each project. News on activities of the abuse project is found at: https://disabilityandabuse.org/whats-new-abuse.htm and updates on the guardianship project are found at: https://disabilityandabuse.org/whats-new-guardianship.htm
Newsfeed. The project produces a weekly newsfeed which surveys news articles throughout the United States and internationally on topics related to disability and abuse. The newsfeed has been operating since 2011. The articles are collected by Debra (D.J.) Stemmler, reviewed and commented on by Dr. Nora J. Baladerian, and uploaded to the website and distributed to the Listserv by Tom Coleman. The newsfeed is found at: http://www.disabilityandabuse.org/newsfeed/contents.htm

Listserv. The project maintains an email service for professionals throughout the United States and internationally who are involved in issues related to disability and abuse. It currently has more than 800 users. Users can submit information to share with others, ask questions, or provide advice in response to requests by others. Examples include: identifying a technology expert on disability access for a grant proposal; identifying a forensic interviewer skilled in interviewing children with disabilities. For more information, see: https://disabilityandabuse.org/listserv.htm

Guidebooks. People who make donations to the project may receive various guidebooks that have been written by Dr. Nora J. Baladerian and published by Spectrum Institute. The list of guidebooks and the amount of the suggested donation are found on the project’s website at: https://disabilityandabuse.org/guidebooks.htm

Other Publications. The project initiates its own publications on topics related to disability and abuse, as well as alerting users of the Listserv and visitors to the website of noteworthy reports, articles, and books published by others on this topic. This year Dr. Baladerian wrote a chapter for a new book titled “Medical Response to Child Sexual Abuse: A Resource for Professionals Working with Children and Families.” The chapter is titled “Child Sexual Abuse of Children with Disabilities.”

Advice & Referrals. Dr. Nora J. Baladerian, director of the Disability and Abuse Project, receives requests for advice or resources on a regular basis by email and phone. To the extent that time permits, she offers generic advice relevant to the inquiry and refers people to publications and organizations that may assist them.

Public Speaking. In addition to presentations done through her private practice, Dr. Baladerian also does speaking engagements through the project on a pro bono basis on topics pertaining to disability and abuse. On November 16, 2019, Dr. Baladerian participated in a workshop at the Taking Charge Conference in Los Angeles titled “Reducing the Risk of Abuse and Ensuring Safety in the Self-Determination Plan.” On October 29, 2019, Dr. Baladerian made a presentation at a ceremony honoring Jim Stream. Jim was a long-time supporter of the Disability and Abuse Project and a member of its Executive Committee for several years. On August 20, 2019, Dr. Baladerian made a presentation on “Trauma Treatment for Abuse Survivors with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities” at the annual meeting of the National Adult Protective Services Association in Denver. On June 12, 2019, Dr. Baladerian conducted a breakout session on “How to Reduce the Risk and Impact of Abuse” at the Milestones National Autism Conference in Cleveland. On May 11, 2019, Dr. Baladerian made two presentations at the American Association of Developmental Medicine and Dentistry in Rochester. Topic #1 was “Methods for Improving Abuse Recognition and Provider Management.” Topic #2 was “An Approach to Reduce the Risk and Impact of Abuse Among Individuals with I/DD.”

Case intervention. Due to financial and time limitations, the project generally does not intervene in individual cases. However, exceptions are sometimes made when the need is urgent and when intervention will assist a larger class of individuals in addition to the specific person involved. Several interventions of this kind occurred this year.

Facebook. Information about disability and abuse is periodically shared through Facebook with 1,500 individuals who have “liked” the Disability and Abuse Project.

Awards. This year Dr. Baladerian received the Nonprofit Psychologist Award from the Los Angeles County Psychological Association. The purpose of the award is to thank nonprofit organizations for important work they are doing in the community. The association also gave Dr. Baladerian a check for $500 to support her work with the Disability and Abuse Project.

Disability and Guardianship Project

Mission

The mission of the Disability and Guardianship Project is to promote access to justice for adults with cognitive and communication disabilities who are involved in guardianship proceedings and to promote viable alternatives to guardianship. The project focuses on adult guardianships involving people with intellectual and developmental disabilities and other adults with cognitive disabilities due to aging, illnesses or injuries. The mission is accomplished through research, education, public policy advocacy, networking, and increasing public awareness.

Project Advisors

Twenty individuals currently serve as advisors to the Disability and Guardianship Project. They include attorneys, educators, advocates, and service providers. The list of advisors is found at: https://spectruminstitute.org/guardianship/consultants.htm
2019 Activities

Website. The project operates a website housing documents, reports, complaints, and resource materials relevant to guardianship and conservatorship reform. The website has a new domain name: http://disabilityandguardianship.org/

What’s New. For the last few years, Spectrum Institute maintained one “what’s new” page for updates on the activities of both projects. To make it easier for website visitors to access information of interest to them, we now operate a separate “what’s new” page for each project. News regarding activities of the guardianship project is found at: https://disabilityandabuse.org/whats-new-guardianship.htm While updates on the abuse project are found at: https://disabilityandabuse.org/whats-new-abuse.htm

Digital Law Library. Thomas F. Coleman, legal director of Spectrum Institute, has written hundreds of documents for the project, including letters, complaints, commentaries, and policy reports. These materials are contained in a Digital Law Library on Guardianship and Disability Rights. The library catalogue was originally published in 2016. It was updated in 2018 and again this year to include more recent materials. It can be accessed at: http://spectruminstitute.org/library/

Guardianship News. A new feature was added to the website in August. Summaries of news stories on guardianship issues are published monthly to help those advocating for reform to keep abreast of what is happening around the nation on this topic. https://spectruminstitute.org/guardianship/news.htm

Capacity Assessment Workgroup. On April 2, 2019, a new workgroup was formed to evaluate the way in which capacity assessments are being done in conservatorship proceedings in California. The 25-member multi-disciplinary team is reviewing legal and professional practice materials on this topic gathered from various academic and advocacy sources throughout the nation and the world. Members will offer suggestions and will review the draft of a report to be written by Thomas F. Coleman in 2020. The report and recommendations for improvements to the capacity assessment process will be submitted to the Chief Justice, Governor, and Legislature. Information on the workgroup is found at: https://spectruminstitute.org/capacity/

Improving Responses to the Abuse of Conservatees. Many conservatees and proposed conservatees with intellectual and developmental disabilities have been victims of physical, sexual, emotional, or financial abuse. Because the nature of their cognitive and communication disabilities places this population at a high risk for abuse and diminishes their ability to report abuse when it occurs, Spectrum Institute promotes the use of trauma-informed justice in conservatorship proceedings. On December 27, 2019, Thomas F. Coleman released a new commentary calling on educators and advocates to use evidence-based statistics on the risk of abuse as they promote ways to reduce the risk and encourage better responses when it occurs. The commentary has received a positive review from Mary Jo Ortiz, M.S.W. She served for many years as a senior research associate for WRMA on child maltreatment data and statistics. WRMA (formerly Walter R. MacDonald & Associates) is a company that helped the federal government create and implement the National Child Abuse and Neglect Data System. Spectrum Institute believes that providing trauma-informed therapy to conservatees who have been abused is imperative. But to do so, qualified therapists must be identified so that referrals can be made to them. That is why Spectrum Institute has asked the Department of Developmental Services for a list of all mental health professionals who provide therapy to regional center clients in California. Once we have this information, we plan to contact the therapists to determine their qualifications and the types of therapy they provide. We have also compiled a bibliography of more than 40 books published in the last 15 years on therapeutic approaches, including trauma-informed therapy, for children and adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. We will be soliciting reviews of these books from mental health professionals and others. Some of these books may be helpful to therapists providing services to California conservatees.

Policy Reports. On September 24, 2014, a report was issued to the California Judicial Council titled “ADA Compliance: A Request to the Judicial Council to Clarify Sua Sponte Obligations of Courts to Ensure Access to Justice.” On January 16, 2019, a report was submitted to Alameda County Supervisor Nate Miley titled “The Path Forward to Justice in Conservatorships.”

Legal Education. Thomas F. Coleman wrote six op-ed articles that were published by the Daily Journal legal newspaper in 2019. The project has updated “Disability & the Law: A Compendium of Commentaries” which includes 21 op-ed articles published in the Daily Journal over the past few years. It is found at: http://disabilityandabuse.org/dj-compendium.pdf Another aspect of our legal education involved our outreach to Disability Rights California, a nonprofit agency that receives millions of dollars in state and federal funds to advocate for the rights of people with disabilities. We urged them to become involved in advocacy for conservatees and proposed conservatees whose rights are being systematically violated. A few weeks later, two attorneys from DRC contacted Coleman to discuss possible ways in which DRCC could help. On April 5, 2019, Coleman gave a lecture at Stanford Law School titled “Conservatorships: Theory v. Reality.”

Judicial Branch Outreach. On November 19, 2019, Thomas F. Coleman had a conversation with Leah Wilson, executive director of the State Bar of California.
They discussed actions that should be taken by the State Bar to ensure effective legal representation by attorneys appointed to represent conservattees and proposed conservattees and to provide meaningful access to the Bar’s complaint system to clients with cognitive disabilities. Coleman asked for support from the bar association for the right-to-counsel bill to be considered by the legislature next year. He also asked for the bar association to require review of new educational materials and training programs for court-appointed attorneys in conservatorship proceedings before MCLE credits are approved. A follow-up email was sent to the State Bar on December 3, 2019, sharing a Daily Journal op-ed on the need for the State Bar to make its complaint system accessible to clients with cognitive and communication disabilities. On November 14, 2019, Coleman made a presentation to the Judicial Council of California at its meeting in San Francisco. That same day he submitted written materials to the Board of Trustees of the State Bar of California. On October 29, 2019, Coleman wrote to the Alameda County Superior Court questioning the judicial and legal ethics of the manner in which Legal Assistance for Seniors has been given a monopoly on court appointments in conservatorship cases and at the same time has a contract to provide legal advice to petitioners in these proceedings. On October 14, 2019, Coleman sent a letter to the presiding judge in each of the 58 superior courts in California calling to their attention the duties of the courts to provide ADA accommodations for known disabilities of court users even if no request for accommodation has been made. On October 1, 2019, Coleman submitted a request to the State Bar to require organizations offering training programs implementing new court rules on education for court-appointed attorneys in conservatorship proceedings to seek review of the programs by the State Bar before the bar association grants permission to offer MCLE credits for these programs. On September 24, 2019, Coleman and attorney Lisa MacCarley made presentations to the Judicial Council at its meeting in Sacramento. Coleman submitted a report to the council documenting that a court rule on ADA accommodations and council literature were not in compliance with federal law. The report urged the council to take prompt action to remedy this problem. At that meeting, the Judicial Council approved new training requirements for court-appointed attorneys in conservatorship proceedings — a proposal submitted to it by Spectrum Institute in 2015. On April 19, 2019, Coleman sent inquiries to the Chief Justices of California, Washington, and Missouri to determine the status of various complaints sent to them about the guardianship and conservatorship systems in those states.

Legislative Branch Outreach. Working with a staff member of California State Senator Tom Umberg, and in consultation with attorney Lisa MacCarley, Thomas F. Coleman developed a right-to-counsel bill for consideration by the California Legislature in January 2020. The measure would ensure that each conservatee and proposed conservatee has counsel in the trial court and on appeal, that counsel should act as a zealous advocate for the stated wishes and/or the rights of the client and that the State Bar would develop performance standards for such attorneys to ensure due process and access to justice in these proceedings. Outreach was also made to all members of the California Assembly’s Select Committee on Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities seeking support from them for the right-to-counsel-bill. The bill is supported by several California and national organizations.

Executive Branch Outreach. On October 25, 2019, Thomas F. Coleman made a presentation and submitted materials to the Fair Employment and Housing Council of the State of California. He suggested several actions the council should take to address systemic and ongoing discrimination by California courts against seniors and other adults with disabilities in probate conservatorship proceedings. On June 2, 2019, Coleman wrote to the California Attorney General urging him to take action to address civil rights violations being perpetrated by the conservatorship system against seniors and other adults with disabilities. There has been no response from the A.G. to this and many previous communications to him over the past several years.

Federal Review. On June 21, 2019 we received a letter from the United States Department of Justice confirming that two complaints we filed with the DOJ in 2015 are still pending. The complaints alleged that the court-appointed counsel program operated by the Los Angeles Superior Court and that is funded by the County of Los Angeles violates the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Media Consultations. The project was contacted by broadcast and print journalists throughout the year seeking background information and quotes on issues pertaining to seniors and people with disabilities involved in guardianship and conservatorship proceedings. Journalist Juliette Farley quoted Thomas F. Coleman in three guardianship articles she published this year. (#1, #2, #3)

Advice and Referrals. The project received emails and phone calls from individuals and family members who felt victimized by guardianship and conservatorship proceedings. They sought advice and referrals. Due to lack of staffing and resources, we are only able to respond to a fraction of the requests we received.

Speaking Engagements. On February 20, 2019, Thomas F. Coleman made a presentation at a national forum on guardianship reform in Tampa. His presentation was titled “Accountability: The Key to Guardianship Reform.” Coleman spoke at a forum on conservatorship reform held in Oakland, California on January 11, 2019.

Case Interventions. On September 30, 2019, Spectrum Institute intervened in a conservatorship appeal in the California Court of Appeal resulting in the appointment of an attorney to represent the conservatee. The court-appointed attorney filed a brief arguing that the order of conservatorship should be reversed due to violations of law committed by the judge in the trial court. Spectrum Institute also intervened in another conservatorship appeal urging the court to appoint counsel for the conservatee on appeal. As of the date of this report, an attorney has not yet been appointed. An intervention was also made in the California Supreme Court on December 7, 2019 and another intervention was made in the California Supreme Court on November 19, 2019. On October 1, 2019, Coleman filed an amicus curiae brief in the California Supreme Court in a conservatorship appeal pending in that court. He used the brief as a vehicle to educate the justices about the dysfunction and systemic flaws of the probate conservatorship system.

Corporate Structure

Both projects are functions of Spectrum Institute – a private foundation incorporated in California in 1987. The foundation has state and federal tax exempt status. It is governed by a four-member board of directors. Dr. Nora J. Baladerian serves as president. Thomas F. Coleman is the corporation’s secretary. Michael A. Vasquez is treasurer. Diane Coleman Rogers is a board member. The corporate address is 1717 E. Vista Chico, A7-PMB384, Palm Springs, CA 92262. The phone and fax number is (818) 230-5156. Email address: tomcoleman@spectruminstitute.org  Website: http://spectruminstitute.org/

Corporate Finances

The activities of Spectrum Institute are primarily done on a volunteer basis. The foundation periodically receives small donations from individuals who value the work of the organization. The donations are used to pay for basic operating costs. The foundation received less than $5,000 in donations in 2019. It had a net worth of less than $5,000 at the end of the fiscal year. More information about the corporation (C1400692) is available on the website of the California Secretary of State. Tax-deductible donations may be made to Spectrum Institute to support either of its projects. To make a donation, go to: https://disabilityandabuse.org/contact.htm
