... It becomes readily apparent that the SLR fulfills an especially significant function which ought to be of vital concern to all — that of presenting the sort of in-depth reportage of issues and legislation imperative to sexual law reform. Such information has been, and continues to be, regularly disregarded or suppressed by the commercially focused newspapers.

... We are impressed with what you are doing with your new publication and feel it will make a significant contribution to the field of human sexuality.

—WILLIAM E. HARTMAN, Ph.D.
*Director, Center for Marital and Sexual Studies
Long Beach, California*

... Our congratulations on your first issue of the SexualLawReporter. You have approached a subject of great sensitivity in a thoroughly responsible manner, in the tradition of other law reporters. It seems to me that your dedication and professional foray into a delicate field of human activity is in keeping with the highest tradition of the Bar.

—G. KEITH WISOT
President, Los Angeles County Public Defenders Association

... We find your publication very worthwhile and certainly much needed.

—CARL JOHNSTON
Editor, H.E.L.P. Newsletter

... Very impressed by the first issue. Enclosed is a check for a subscription. Thanks for going through the trouble to produce this service.

—PAUL ALBERT
Attorney, San Francisco

... I think the SLR is a worthwhile and informative publication — keep up the good work.

SPECIALIZED NEWSLETTER NARROWS COMMUNICATIONS GAP FOR ATTORNEYS, EDUCATORS, SEXUAL LAW REFORMERS

The SexuaLawReporter, a bi-monthly newsletter which started publication in April, 1975, covers a field that has been long neglected by the general news media and the specialized press.

In an age in which sexual awareness is developing rapidly, there is a strong impetus toward sexual reform that requires a reliable line of communication if it is to grow and be successful.

The SexuaLawReporter is developing a nationwide communications network that will, through the newsletter, inform sexual reform activists, members of the bench and bar, law school professors and students, and others of judicial and legislative efforts—both successes and failures—on the federal, state and local levels.

In addition, the SexuaLawReporter will cover related fields, such as sociology, theology, literature, medicine and psychology, among others. The newsletter will explore how various disciplines contribute toward strengthening or loosening current sexual laws and attitudes—and what role they play in reshaping those laws and attitudes.

This newsletter, published by a non-profit corporation, is not a totally neutral publication. While it will not take positions on legislation or lobby for specific changes, its editorial policy contends that many legal sexual restraints, as currently written and enforced, are often detrimental to the exercise of democratic rights.

In its bi-monthly issues, the SexuaLawReporter will report the news and analyze key developments in the field. For example: Why legislation passed or failed; the consistency or inconsistency of judicial rulings based on prior decisions and the court's attitudes on sexual matters, or the prospects of new proposals toward reform based on past experience and critical appraisal by informed activists.
